

Competition Is Keen In Bovey Shield Contest

Kenneth G. Baker Of Arts Wins Over Large Field

FRESHMEN ONLY

Dean Corbett, Professor Scott And L. C. Carroll Act As Judges

Kenneth G. Baker, freshman in Arts was declared the winner of the Bovey Shield at the Freshman Speaking Contest held yesterday afternoon in the ballroom of the Union. The judges who were Dean Corbett, of the Faculty of Law, Professor R. Scott, of the same faculty and Lovell Carroll, member of the executive of the debating union, took very little time in coming to a decision, declaring Baker to be victor by virtue of superior poise, delivery and diction.

The subject upon which the entrants had to speak was "Resolved that Latin be compulsory for students in the first year at the University". Each person was allowed to speak for five minutes either for or against the proposition. There were in all about twenty-five entries of which only sixteen appeared. The majority of the speakers appeared quite at ease and spoke fluently for the allotted amount of time. Of the number who spoke, eleven dealt with the affirmative side of the resolution the remainder believing that Latin should not be compulsory at the University.

Sense of Accuracy
In the course of the various speeches delivered by the freshmen many points for and against the compulsory study of Latin were introduced. The predominant argument in favor of the study of Latin was that it formed the basis of the English language and

$50,000 Bequeathed For Upkeep of Osler Library

The sum of $50,000 has been bequeathed by Lady Osler for the upkeep of the Osler Memorial Library now being established in a special room in the Medical Building. It was announced yesterday. The late Lady Osler was the widow of the late Sir William Osler, one of McGill's most famous graduates and a member of the teaching staff for many years.

A large number of volumes belonging to the late Sir William Osler's personal library arrived in Montreal this week to be added to the numerous valuable medical works now housed in the ground floor of the Medical Building but which are being moved to the special library room on the third floor.

Some 8,000 volumes are in the collection and these are said to constitute one of the finest individual medical libraries in the world. It consists, in the main, of volumes dealing with the bibliography and history of medical science as well as books dealing with a wide range of medical topics.

The Osler Memorial Library was first inaugurated in 1920, at the time of Sir William's death. Since that time the university has been occupied in arranging and cataloguing the books, and recently in fitting up a permanent room in the Medical Building for the valuable collection of medical works. The bequest from Lady Osler will enable the university to house the books according to the best known library methods and perpetuate the use of these medical works for future generations of students and medical men at McGill.

From Committee Settled Many Important Details

Many important details regarding the coming dance were settled at a meeting of the Junior Prom Committee held yesterday afternoon. The few remaining matters which involved further investigation are to be finally completed at another meeting to be held in the Music Room of the Union at 1 o'clock on Saturday.

Most of the tickets have already been sold, but it was pointed out that a small number are still in the hands of the Prom representatives of the various faculties. Having been available to upperclassmen for the past few weeks, the few remaining tickets are now to be offered to

Students' Work Aids Professors

Med. Fresh-Soph Banquet Held Last Night

VENETIAN GARDENS

Sir Andrew MacPhail Spoke On Student And Faculty Relationships

"The reward of the professors who sacrifice their valuable time in teaching the Medical students is not monetary, since they can earn more money in their practice, but merely the work of the students," said Sir Andrew MacPhail at the sixth annual Medical Freshman-Sophomore banquet held last night at the Venetian Gardens.

The first toast of the evening after the supper, was proposed to the Alma Mater by Dr. R. Hoggie, and in the absence of Dr. Martin, replied by Mr. Simpson. He pointed out that the toast had been made to the University, since many were apt to forget that the University is more than the Medical School. He regretted the fact that Arts students could not go beyond the study of the rabbit in their zoological practices, since the study of man belongs to the Medical line, and expressed the hope that men who did not intend to practice medicine would nevertheless be allowed to study human anatomy.

Sir Andrew MacPhail, in answering the toast to the Faculty proposed by J. B. Stewart, mentioned the fact that there should be closer fellowship between the members of the Faculty and the Student body. The distance between the professor and the students should of course be something but not necessarily great, he pointed out.

The third toast of the evening was to the Sophomore class, by Fitzgibbon, and quite handsily answered by Hoggie, the president of the second year.

Among the other speakers were Dr. Beattie, Taft, Collip, and Bliss. The former explained that the Freshmen should not regard anatomy as a drudgery, since they got something out of it.

During the supper a contortionist entertained and she received great applause. Dancing featured the latter part of the evening.

To Show Canti Film

Illustrates Development Of Living Cells And Tissues

An opportunity to see the famous Canti film will shortly be given to students of medicine and biology. This film was prepared by Dr. R. S. Canti in the Strangeways Research Laboratory, Cambridge, and St. Bartholomew's Hospital, London. It shows the development of living cells and tissues, both normal and pathological, and shows the effect upon them of radium emanations.

This film purchased by the Medical Society, and loaned by them to the medical schools of Canada will be shown on Tuesday November 27th at 5 p.m. in the Moyses Hall.

Ticket Sale Has Broken All Records

Players' Club Perform Friday And Saturday Evenings

ANNOUNCE PATRONS

Lawrence Hart Will Entertain On Piano During Intervals

The sale of tickets for "The Watched Pot," the play to be produced by the Players' Club next Friday and Saturday evenings, has exceeded all previous records for the club's performances. The returns of the ticket sellers yesterday afternoon showed every indication of two full houses by the time the show begins. The executive are reserving a few tickets for any students who have not yet bought them. As there is a great demand, anyone who is intending to buy tickets is advised to do so at once.

It was definitely announced yesterday that Lawrence Hart has consented to play the piano during the intervals, possibly with the accompaniment of a violin.

List of Patrons
The list of patrons of the club was also announced last night. It reads as follows: Acting-Principal Dr. and Mrs. S. P. Martin, Dean and Mrs. Ira Mackay, Dean and Mrs. H. M. Mackay, Dean and Mrs. P. E. Corbett, Dean and Mrs. H. C. Perlin, Colonel and Mrs. W. Bovey, Prof. and Mrs. F. E. Lloyd, Mrs. Vaughan.

The club has been very fortunate in its choice of an Honorary President. Dr. Woodhead has continually supervised the activities of the club and has given much invaluable help and advice, according to a statement made by a member of the executive.

To Perform "Le Cid" Tomorrow

Tickets Now Available From French Department

Tickets are now available for the performance of "Le Cid" in Moyses Theatre by the Porte St. Martin Company on Friday afternoon, and may be obtained from the professors of the French Department. The play will begin at 3 o'clock, and will be performed exactly as it has been done lately in the Montreal theatres by the company.

As the performance is only open to students of French, the play chosen, it is announced, has been selected specially, as it is one of the basic ones in French literature, and all students have to study it at some time or other.

It is felt that an opportunity such as is presented by the visit of the Porte St. Martin Company should not be missed, and so the French department arranged to have the play performed in its entirety. Therefore they urge upon all students of French the advisability of getting tickets immediately and taking advantage of the opportunity offered.

The cast for the production will be identical with the one which has performed the play with such success in the local theatres, and will include M. Joule, Mlle. Rouer, M. Almette and other favorites.

Revolt Against Proctors' Rule

Oxford, England, Nov. 21.—A thousand students rioted at Oxford University today, storming the Proctors' building, shouting, "Down with the Proctors," "Down with Gown Rule!" The students revolted against what they claimed was the unusually strict enforcement of university rules in recent weeks.

Windows were broken and telephones were disconnected. Fire engines were summoned, but the municipal police stood by without interfering.

Later, a great mob of students gathered at the university in consequence of a fake summons distributed to individual students last night on official university stationery, indicating that the Proctor desired to interview the students at 9.45 a.m.

University authorities regarded the riot as serious and were trying to discover the ringleaders.

The proctors at Oxford have wide administrative authority and are responsible for discipline at the University. "Gown Rule" refers to the

Delta Sigma To Have Impromptu Speaking Today

An impromptu speaking contest will be held at the meeting of the Delta Sigma Society this afternoon at 4 o'clock in the R.V.C. An effort has been made to have a large variety of subjects so that the meeting will be entertaining for those who do not take part. This impromptu speaking contest is open to all women students at the University.

The contest is divided into two parts—impromptu debating and impromptu speaking—and prizes will be awarded to the best speakers in each division. It has not yet been announced what the prizes are, but it is reported that they will be worth the trouble put forth to win them.

Miss Beatrice Lyman, Miss Marian Ross, and Miss Isabel Seiver, all well-known graduates of the R.V.C. will act as judges of the contest.

At the conclusion of the meeting tea will be served.

This, however, will by no means seriously affect the choice of seats offered the outsiders as special precautions will be taken in that direction this year.

William Strain of Commerce is handling the management of tickets this year. Class representatives may obtain their tickets from him this morning at the office in the Union.

Scarlet Key Ask For Nominations

Elections Will Take Place Next Week

All Scarlet Key nomination sheets, signed by the members of the faculty of the nominee, must be in the hands of the Student's Council by one o'clock Saturday. No nominations will be received after this time. This year, the annual elections of the Scarlet Key Society are being held at the same time as those of the Student's Council.

The Scarlet Key Society acts as a sort of reception committee to all visiting athletic teams. Representatives from the Society meet the visitors at the train, and look after their needs during their stay in the city. For the last two years the Scarlet Key has also supervised the ushering at the football games at the Stadium. The Scarlet Key Society was organized in the session 1925-26. It is composed of 35 members the majority of whom are elected by popular vote.

Novel Program To Be Followed

Cercle Francais Discussed Plans

OPENING MEETING

Dr. Villard Gave Original Method Of Learning To Speak French

"The Cercle Francais is the best organization on the Campus" stated Dr. Paul Villard in addressing the members of the Cercle at the opening meeting held last night in the Union. Plans for the year, the type of program to be adopted for the following meetings and joint meetings with the Societe Francaise were discussed.

Dr. Villard spoke in a most humorous fashion. He gave his annual advice on how best to acquire a speaking knowledge of the French language. "Select a chair" stated the speaker, "and talk to it each day for about five minutes. After two weeks have gone by, discard it and use a mirror. Fluency is thereby obtained in a very short time."

Dr. Villard advised each member to bring at least one friend to the next meeting. In this way, the members would come to take more pride in the Cercle. He encouraged the members by stating his conviction that it was easier to learn to speak French than to understand it.

After a heated discussion, it was decided, pending the final decision of the executive to hold two meetings per month. At the first of these, the program would consist of a debate, discussion, and possibly a skit. At the second, there would be a more elaborate program, such as a Mock Parliament.

With a view to increasing the membership of the Cercle, a motion was brought forward to reduce the required fee. It was defeated by a large majority.

The gathering then adjourned to the ballroom where a spirited singing took place.

Misconduct on Campus Alleged

Birmingham, Ala. Nov. 21.—Howard College, one of the largest Baptist schools of the south, was in an uproar today as a special committee appointed by the board of trustees reviewed charges preferred by 21 students of improper conduct on the campus.

Among the charges was an allegation that a member of the faculty had asserted that "if all Bibles in the world were piled up and burned the world would be better off within 100 years." The complaints alleged that Dr. John C. Dawson, president, had failed to give a sympathetic hearing when this and other complaints were made to him.

Three other charges being probed are that students, during a recent fraternity rush, staged a mock "compulsory wedding" on the campus, which was witnessed by a mixed group of students; that gambling and drinking had occurred on the campus, and that fraternities had permitted dancing in their houses, contrary to school regulations.

Intercollegiate Debate

Tickets are now on sale for the Women's Intercollegiate Debate on Immigration. They may be bought from any members of the executive of the Delta Sigma or from Bill Gentlemen, for 25 cents. This debate is open to all students, both men and women, and any of the genial public who may be interested.

Debate Shows Advantages Of Dictatorships

Pollard And Alchin Upheld Affirmative Successfully

DIOCESAN COLLEGE

Students Presented Rev. E. I. Rexford, Former Principal With Desk Writing Set

"Resolved that a Dictatorship such as exercised by Mussolini is better for a country than a Parliamentary form such as that of England" was the topic under discussion at a meeting of the Diocesan College Debating Society last night in the Diocesan College. "Sammy" Pollard and R. H. Alchin upholding the affirmative won the decision over John Forth and George Hall. Dr. G. Abbott-Smith, the Reverend E. I. Rexford, and Mrs. J. Farthing acted as judges.

A feature of the evening was the presentation of a desk writing set, to Dr. Rexford by J. E. King, president of the Diocesan College Students' Association on behalf of the student body of the session 1927-28.

Pollard opened the debate by outlining the conditions of various governments in Europe during and immediately after the Great War. He contrasted the conditions in Italy when a parliament was in power and when Mussolini gained control. He spoke of the improvements which Mussolini had wrought under the heads: Domestic, Foreign and Colonial Policies.

Forth of the negative side, attempted to show how Great Britain under a Parliamentary form of government was advancing while Italy under a dictatorship was retrogressing. Mussolini was only human and was not infallible, he declared. In conclusion he

Classics To Be Disputed Again

Arts Sophs Hold Third Round of Debating Contest Today

The study of classics and the question of whether or not it is essential to modern education, will be decided today, at least as far as Arts sophomores are concerned, at the third round of the class debating society. This meeting will be held at 4 p.m. in Room 79 of the Arts Building.

Supporting the study of dead languages to the extent of honouring in Latin, Alan Edson will protect the affirmative side of issue, with the help of E. Colford, Tough and Fulford will oppose them. This is a topic which has been under discussion for some time, and over which many debaters have wrangled.

Coinciding to a great extent with this was the freshman public speaking contest held yesterday, where the value of first year latin was criticized. It is rumoured from reliable sources that the gathering was enriched by two or three of the soph debaters who were on the warpath for extra points.

While much interest in the choosing of the class-pins was taken last week, now that the time has come to take money and orders, it has been found that the members of Art '31 are less enthusiastic. Up to date about twenty have expressed their wish to obtain a pin, but in the opinion of the members of the pin committee, this is somewhat disappointing.

Following the debate, those present will have an opportunity to book their orders and facilitate the work of those in charge of obtaining the pins. It is pointed out that all money must be collected before the pins are ordered from the jewellers. No money for pins will be received after Saturday 1st.

League Meets Here

Representatives Of Eight Universities To Discuss Debating

Representatives of eight Eastern Canada universities will convene here next Saturday for the annual meeting of the Inter-University Debating League. Bishops, Loyola, McGill, McMaster, Osgoode Hall, Ottawa, University of Western Ontario, and the Ontario Agricultural College will send representatives to draw up a schedule of debates for the season and to discuss rules and regulations governing inter-university debates.

Philip Foran, vice-president of the McGill Debating Union this year will be the McGill representative at the meeting.

A PROBLEM

It may seem paradoxical that there can be two ideals in any particular situation. Be that as it may, there are truly two ideals with regard to the position of women at McGill in relation to student activities. They are, firstly, that women should have an equal status with men in all student affairs; secondly, that women should have distinct organisations for themselves in every activity.

At the present time there is no distinct differentiation, not that this is advocated, but there have been and will continue to be clashes of policy as long as the present status exists. As things stand, due to a ruling by a grand benefactor of McGill—God rest his soul—there is no place for women in McGill College. Hence they have no status as members of the University but are affiliated with it in the institution of the R.V.C.

In student affairs the McGill Students' Society has authority over male students only, and the female students are controlled by the McGill Women's Student Society. Neither of these two societies has any jurisdiction over the members of the other. It is in the last respect that trouble, if there is any, will arise.

Seeing that the Students' Executive Council, which is the Executive Committee of the McGill Students' Society, has no jurisdiction over women, it seems strange that it allows women to hold office, and executive office at that, in the societies which come under its immediate jurisdiction.

One particular instance of this is the Choral Society. The Students' Council has this society under its most direct control and votes its budget for the year and is responsible for any pecuniary gains or losses that may be entailed. On the executive of this society there are three women who are elected annually. It has happened that the Choral Society has incurred a loss. Here it was that women had some say in the policy of the club, the ultimate authority of which does not countenance women.

The object of this is not to discredit women in student activities, especially the Choral Society for that organisation would not function if there were no women in it, but to show the peculiar position in which the Students' Council is placed. The best arrangement possible at the present time is obviously a working arrangement only, and not an entirely satisfactory one either, for the women are in the position of being in, although not exactly of, those societies which the Council controls. A more satisfactory arrangement will undoubtedly be worked out eventually, but in the meantime it is well to recognize the facts.

A WAY OF LIFE

To live life fully one must understand life thoroughly. Such an understanding can be obtained partially through a study of psychology, but mainly and most importantly a study of people themselves. Psychology can only supply a theoretical basis to work upon; ultimate knowledge come only from personal contact and observation. And such observation can only be complete when it embraces all strata of society, all types of individuals and under all conditions of life.

This sounds like an impossible task — a task for which one life-time is all too short. Yet the very least that we can do is to attempt to make as much progress towards this ideal as possible. In exactly that measure in which we are successful, so will we understand and appreciate the meaning of life.

In many of the larger universities social life is, in great part, ruled by cliques and factions, each exclusive and self-centered, offering stubborn resistance to a lowering of its barriers, smugly content in its empyrean isolation.

It is a serious indictment when a University is accused of succumbing to a clique spirit, fostering a spirit of snobbishness which makes for a narrow and perverted outlook on life.

BOOTS VIEWED AND REVIEWED

CARL WITTKKE'S HISTORY OF CANADA IS AN OUTSTANDING STORY OF OUR DEVELOPMENT

A HISTORY OF CANADA. By Prof. Carl Wittke. Alfred A. Knopf, New York; and Longmans, Green, Toronto. 395 Pages. Price $5.00.

(By James P. Manion)

Just recently I was talking to one of our outstanding professors, and happened to mention Carl Wittke's new History of Canada. "You know," he said, "I've just received a copy of that book, and from a cursory glance, I should strongly recommend it as an admirable piece of work. To my mind it treats of history from the only proper angle—from the viewpoint of social and economic development. It seems very impartial, clearly written, accurate, and perhaps above all, it is interesting."

Mr. Wittke, if his studies have not altogether specialized on Canadian affairs, has at least taken a vast interest in our country, as is attested by the fact that his writings have appeared for a long time in such authoritative and recognized mediums as the Canadian Historical Review and Current History. We may take it for granted then, that the author draws from a strong background of knowledge in this effort to treat Canadian history in terms of material development, instead of the usual sweeping glances over a chronological list of events.

The series of works of which "A History of Canada" forms a part is one of the many innovations which characterize the efforts of that modernist among publishers, Alfred A. Knopf. The whole series is meant to convey a new impression as to the ultimate sphere of history: how far the trend will take us remains to be seen. It is at any rate a splendid vision of his. It is a re-echoing in the conservative and dignified halls of historical science of the resounding renaissance in fiction: a turning of the psychological reflector on the investigation of history. There is an affiliation, a juxtaposition, between the two: the novel was formerly a compendium of more or less interesting events in the hero's life, whereas the modern tendency is towards an analysis of the mental reactions caused by such events. One was a spirited group of exciting happenings, the other a study of human character. The incidents of life may be better known in the first case, but in the second, the motivating principles and forces will be understood. The reader will be better off. Cannot the analogy be drawn directly from this in the case of history? Will not a study of developments, rather than the usual glossary of events, each with its cause and effects, each cut off abruptly from the other, each studied in itself instead of indirectly as only another factor in a general progression, tend to culminate at last in a proper understanding and subsequently in a proper application of the old adage that "history repeats itself"? Will it not change history from a literary art to a science of correlation of cause and effect?

History As A Unit

That is exactly what the author endeavours to do. His description of the war of 1812 is accurate and detailed enough; but yet the reader feels that the insertion of the details is merely because such a knowledge will be found useful in understanding certain changes in custom or ideas which will later be detailed to us. His Union Act of 1841 is the result, not of a sudden burst of revolutionary spirit in 1837, but of a long process which found its first well-defined expression in that revolt. Finally, equal status within the Empire was not the result of fervent post-war mutual admiration, but the result of many factors that had been growing more important, and found a vent at this convenient time.

There is an undercurrent throughout the book, of the slow, painstaking effort, a study of the firm grasp on nature that effected, through the three hundred years of our history, a great subjugation of natural forces, of the unshackling from her bonds which marked the supreme heroism of our pioneers, of a reverence for our "anceurs" which is usually difficult to find in an alien writer. The reason why native historical writers are as a rule preferred is because of their catering to the self-love and vanity of the contemporary. After a reading, one is to say: "Don't I belong to a wonderful country?" Canadians should be able to find double satisfaction in that many of our most flattering histories were written by impartial outsiders. Parkman in particular, writing in sympathy with the French viewpoint, was the greatest extoller of our virtues as a race. And here is Wittke, writing in the United States for American consumption, in reference to the War of 1812: "The War of 1812 is one of the most unsatisfactory episodes in the long story of Anglo-American relations. It contributed little to the military and naval glories of either power, and for the United States it was full of many disgraceful defeats. Only in Canada have the memories of the war been rightly cherished, and Canadian historians can point with pride to an heroic and successful defense (sic) of their long frontier against a much more powerful invader."

Very Few Inaccuracies

The author seems to be very careful to avoid mistakes of any kind in his work. There do appear a few errors, which might be credited to his publishers. At one time, he mentions William T. White when the obvious reference is to Sir Thomas White; at another he calls the late Sir James Loughheed by a cautious misnomer, Loughheed; still another time, he places an accent on the name of Mr. Sulte, for which the late Benjamin might very well be in-Sulte. But on the whole the book is free from inaccuracies of name and of fact. He does, to my mind, treat the French-Canadian as a rather special people within Canada, which is a mistake for any contemporary who realizes that one third of Canada's population is French. He talks of them rather as an outsider does about the Dutch in South Africa: as if there were some difference in status, and as if the whole work were written from the point of view of the other party. However, this is a mistake of suggestion, not of assertion. Mr. Wittke may perhaps also elaborate a little, accentuate if you will, on the present difficulties of Canada, and on any talk there may have been at different times of annexation; he says quite decidedly that there is no thought of that at the present time, but the suggestion remains, rankles a little in the mind of a Canadian.

Interesting Contemporary Study

One of the most interesting phases of the book deals with the period from 1900 to 1927. It is seldom that we have a chance to read a history which includes a study of our own times, and there is quite a little thrill to find a period which we ourselves remember, already written in the annals of history. Most important of all, he discusses Canada's position in the Empire, does so quite frankly, and if we can consider his the American viewpoint, his discussion should satisfy the Canadian's desire for foreign recognition. The book should soon find its way to the shelves of all up-to-date universities, and to the book-cases of all those people who are interested in Canadians.

THE PRIVACY AGENT, By Bernard K. Sandwell. J. M. Dent and Sons, Toronto. Price $2.00.

(By J. P. M.)

A Privacy Agent is the opposite to a Publicity Agent. According to B. K. Sandwell, formerly professor of Economics at McGill University, and now editor of the Financial Times, so many people are effected by adverse publicity that they will soon be employing regularly paid secretaries to hush up deleterious matters. Thus a new, a glorious, a dazzling field is opening up. The cleverest young men on the continent will be gladly accepted in this new profession, and their careers will develop them to the highest possible point. New university courses may be started on Privacy, degrees may be granted and millionaires may in the future employ two men who are to work hand in hand: one to promote the necessary publicity, another to create a requisite amount of privacy.

Perhaps one of their first functions will be to prevent the prying glances of the Tabloids from penetrating to the social atmosphere of the Bath-tub parties which Mr. Sandwell later goes on to describe so vividly. At any rate he has not told us whether any connection between the two would be needed. I imagine that such affairs are of a more or less private character.

Mr. Sandwell's latest book includes a series of two or three dozen skits, humorous and otherwise, on a vast variety of subjects, ranging in effect over as large an area as that covered by Stephen Leacock in "Short Circuits," the book which was recently reviewed in these columns. Not that any comparison is involved, for wit is a hard thing to determine and a harder thing to judge. It is so very difficult to say "This man's humour differs from that man's in such and such an essential point." Still, there are essential points upon which humour can be based. When we read Leacock, we picture to ourselves the observer of human affairs, standing slightly apart, not on a cynical eminence, but on the more human level of sympathy. He witnesses a whole series of events and as he connects them up in his own mind he chuckles! He at least, has seen the pathos and the stirring life-principles involved but he has also seen that men take their everyday troubles too much to heart. He chafes the world on its concern and seriousness. In his way, he is as great a stimulant or tonic as Mencken, or any other satirist, in his. His medicine is sweet while the other is bitter, and therein lies the difference.

I don't know how to compare Sandwell's humour with that. He does not use his knowledge of human nature so much as his knowledge of human activities. Which are two altogether different things, even on the face of it. Not only that, but whereas Leacock may take a very serious topic and develop its humorous angle, Sandwell prefers to wait till he strikes on a funny idea, and then tries to build up a story on this idea. As a result, one is often prone to expect too much of his story from its title, which is always imaginative, and appears to run away from the rest of the opus. Because of this, the sketch may appear at times to be laboured and forced in an arduous attempt to keep the interest right to the end. This certainly does not appear in all his "modest proposals," but it spoils a few of them.

But if you have already read Leacock, you should read Sandwell to appreciate the different way in which their types of humour crop up in the story.

George Jihavlec son of the Finance Minister of Czechoslovakia, is the latest addition to Alberta's list of notable farmers, led by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, whose E. P. ranch is only one royal demesne among several, including that of the Duke of Sutherland. Young Jihavlec, who is only 22 years of age, has settled near Lethbridge, where he is gaining farm experience on the farm of C. R. Daniel before launching out for himself.

Ambitious Plans Formulated For Faculty Hockey

17 Classes Included In Schedule For Season

EARLY START

Interfaculty hockey will take on a new lease of life this year along with all other intra-mural sport, if plans now well underway crystallize. The highly successful interfaculty football season just completed have encouraged the authorities to go ahead with an enthusiastic hockey program, and as the project now stands the ice sports will receive its biggest boost locally in years.

A group of 17 classes have been included in the schedule, it being noted that several departments who have continually defaulted their games in previous years, are not included, thus making the league a compact one, composed of classes anxious to go through with a stiff program of hockey.

The squads have been divided into five groups for organization purposes. With increased rink accommodation for practice and games, the schedule calls for each team to meet every other twice during the season.

Difficulties in the matter of the adequate handling of the games will be overcome this year by a system whereby the referees for each game will be announced with the schedule at the beginning of the season. Colin McLeod, who is interfaculty hockey manager, will appoint the arbiters.

Practices for the class teams will begin before the Christmas holiday and the regular schedule will start immediately after. The length of the schedule necessitates the early start.

The teams are tentatively grouped as follows:

- Group 1.—Arts 1, Science 1, Commerce 1, Medicine 1.
- Group 2.—Arts 2, Science 2, Commerce 2, Medicine 2.
- Group 3.—Arts 3, Science 3, Commerce 3, Medicine 3.
- Group 4.—Arts 4, Theology, Law.
- Group 5.—Commerce 4, Science 4.

Accordingly, a thorough knowledge of Latin is necessary if English is to be spoken with any degree of correctness. The study of Latin, it was pointed out by several speakers, develops a sense of accuracy and precision. In addition to this, the study of Latin is indispensable to the students following such professions as law, medicine, theology and dentistry. It was also shown, by some speakers, that the study of Latin developed powers of concentration and also strengthened the memory.

The outstanding argument used by those entrants opposed to the resolution was that compulsion breeds resentment. The student who is compelled to study Latin against his own desire to do so, will do the amount of work sufficient to get him through the year and then allows himself to forget all he learned. It was argued that students should be allowed to take only those courses which may interest them. Several speakers pointed out that Latin was of no practical use to students following such professions as engineering or science. The time required for the study of Latin might very well be applied to subjects more in keeping with the profession.

Best Contest Yet
When the last of the entrants had finished his speech, the chairman of the meeting, P. E. Foran, vice-president of the McGill Debating Union, called upon Col. Bovey, sponsor of the contest, to say a few words while the judges were coming to a decision. The colonel expressed his pleasure at the quality of the speaking displayed.

The competition, he declared, was improving year by year in marked contrast to the first year when the speaking was so poor that the shield was not awarded and a second meeting had to be called. He stated, that in his opinion this was the best contest yet held since its conception, and that he was glad that so many had seen fit to participate. "I am surprised at the unanimity displayed. I am sure Dr. Woodhead would be delighted," said Col. Bovey.

The spokesman for the judges was Dean Corbett. He emphasized the necessity of proper poise in addressing an audience. Keeping one's hands in the pockets or leaning on the table makes a bad impression. While proper poise and occasional gesture impressed an audience favourably and help putting an argument across. He also warned the speakers against the practice of clipping their language.

As the speakers had used their notes rather extensively, the Dean pointed out the mistake of this practice. He then announced that because of superiorly over all the entrants in poise, delivery and language, K. G. Baker was the winner of the judges.

The victor was not present when the award was made as he together with other speakers had left the hall when the case went to the judges. The chairman, in closing the meeting, extended his congratulations to Baker and thanked the judges for their assistance.

Senior Hockey

There will be a hockey practice at the Forum from 1 to 2 today for the following:—Pow-ers, Smith, McTeer, St. Germain, Doherty, McGerrigle, Robertson, Farquharson, Nesbitt, Kline, Painter, Bedbrook, Ward, McGillivray, Hutchison, Ireland and Chalmers. There will be a practice hour on Saturday for any others interested in playing intermediate and Junior hockey.

Meeting Of Winter Club

Enlarged Sphere Of Activities For Coming Season

The McGill Winter Outing Club is planning to hold their annual fall meeting on Wednesday Nov. 28th. At this meeting, as well as the usual business and discussion, a proposed change in the policy of the club will be considered, and matters of general interest to all who are followers of winter sports, whether skating, snow-shoeing or skiing will be brought up. This year the club intends to enlarge its activities by holding proficiency ski meets for novices, and perhaps for co-eds. Up to the present the feeling has been that the club activities have been limited to men who are trying for the intercollegiate team, but this year it is hoped that all interested will feel that the activities are for them too, and that the club will be a greater factor in boosting winter sports at McGill.

Membership in the club is signified by a small red and white badge with the name on it. These will be distributed at the meeting on Nov. 28th, or may be obtained from the executive. Wearers of the badge will be entitled to enter meets and to all the privileges of the club. It is felt too that if all the McGill men who ski, skate, or snowshoe wear it, a better feeling and greater unity will be produced among winter sports enthusiasts.

Swimmers Prepare For Active Season

Polo Teams In Farewell Performance Tonight

The two polo teams play their last games tonight, the juniors against the Nationale A.A.A. and the seniors against the M.A.A.A. Blues.

Coach Harold Flaks after putting both teams through a stiff workout yesterday pronounced himself well satisfied with the progress of the mermen and predicted a win tonight to wind up a long series of defeats.

Many of the new men are just beginning to get into their stride and after a little more practice great things may be expected of them. The juniors in particular have shown remarkable improvement. Anderson, Davis and Church look like useful acquisitions to the squad. The whole team has worked hard and thoroughly deserves the victory it is hoped they will win tonight.

The Senior team will be weakened by the loss of last year's men, Mort Gibbons, Phil Mathams and Vic Carholm who will not be able to play tonight. In spite of their absence the seniors will be able to field a strong squad. He urged all freshmen to attend the sessions of the Debating Union and to cultivate their oratorical powers as much as possible.

The complete list of speakers who participated follows: M. A. Dolg, C. W. Davis, K. G. Baker, K. Angel, E. Cockerton, D. O. Hamilton, D. H. P. Black, A. Shechter, H. E. Chalk, R. H. Walker, T. J. Watson, D. L. Gales, Robert M. Calder Jr., R. C. Hamilton, H. Doody and C. Currie.

The play at the last few rehearsals has been found to be longer than was at first thought so it has been decided to begin the show promptly at 8.10. This will be especially necessary on account of two changes of scenery during the performance. The rehearsals have been progressing remarkably well, and the director, Mr. Chesney, has expressed himself as entirely satisfied with all the members of the cast. During the course of the week there has been one small change in the personnel of the cast. Cluny Dale is now taking the part of the page boy.

Arrangements for the performance are practically complete. The scenery and the properties have all been secured. Programmes have gone to press and the House Manager is busy making final preparations for the ushering, and ticket collecting.

Orphans Ready For Grid Final

Eastern Championship At Stake On Saturday

TIGERS FAVORITES

Four Thousand Varsity Supporters To Make Hamilton Trip

(Special to The Daily from C. H. Rayner The Varsity)

Toronto, Ont. Nov. 21.—Varsity Orphans, the team which came from nowhere to blank Balmby Beach and Sarnia in two successive games, thus winning the Q. R. F. U. championship, are down to hard work this week.

With the exception of Captain Charlie Baillie, whose injured knee will keep him out of the game on Saturday, the Blue squad is in first class condition. Coach Jimmie Douglas is giving them just enough work to keep them right on edge for the battle.

The Orphans are relying a lot on the fast backfield combination of Sinclair and McFayden when they visit Tigertown next Saturday and the big question is "Can Huck Welch outkick Sinclair?" Jack has done some pretty hoofing this year, though most of it has been done on a heavy field. Varsity tacklers showed perfect form last week and Coach Jimmie Douglas is depending a lot on their work to stop the tiger backfield. End runs are being given special attention this week, as the heavy Hamilton line will be difficult to smash on plunges.

Though the yellow and black are heavy favorites, the squad of intercollegiate cast-offs are being strongly supported at U. of T. and it is expected that close to four thousand will make the trip to the Tigers' lair to witness the Eastern Canada final.

team against their old rivals M.A.A.A.

The game is at the K. of C. tank on Mountain St., starting at 8.15 p.m. Plenty of excitement will be provided for the spectators and it is hoped that a large number of McGill students will be on hand to cheer the team to victory.

The probable line-ups:
Juniors: Anderson, Davis, Dolg, Church, Price? Taylor, Knorr, and Hutchison.

Seniors: Astwood, Shackell, Payton, Mersereau, Bourne and Gardner.

Swimming Notes

Now that the local water-polo season is nearing its end, swimming is beginning to come into its own. Less than two weeks ago four McGill men, Munroe Bourne, Bennie Lyman, Clayton Bourne and Gordon Poole won the 800 yards Dominion championship relay race. On the same night Munroe Bourne won another event the 440 yards free-style.

This is an auspicious start for the swimming team and it is to be hoped that they will keep up the good work.

Anyone interested in swimming is urged to turn out for the practices which are held in the K. of C. tank on Mountain St. on Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 5.25 to 6.20 and on Thursdays from 5.30 to 6.00. On Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays Coach Flaks will be there to help. No experience or ability is needed.

There will be a Frosh-Soph Swimming Meet this Friday November 23 at the K. of C. tank at 5.00 p.m. Anyone wishing to enter should give their names to their Faculty representatives before 5.00 p.m. today. The representatives are as follows: Medicine: Knorr; Commerce: Shackell; Science: H. B. Price (Please leave applications at Harry's office); Arts: R. M. Anderson or Pete Aylen (leave applications at Bill Gentlemen's office).

DOWN TO BRASS TACKS

With L. S. B. Shapiro

CORRESPONDENCE IS RIFE

The following correspondence has been received and is self-explanatory:

L. S. B. Shapiro, Sports Editor, McGill Daily.

My dear Shapiro:—I wish you would use your influence in your estimable column "down to brass tacks" to promote a few intercollegiate hockey contests. The much-lamented demise of the C.I.H.U. has resulted in McGill only playing two senior college hockey fixtures this year and only one before McGill fans, unless we consider the contests with University of Montreal in the Senior Group.

This state of things is to be deplored. In the first instance, I am all against college teams participating in contests with city clubs and for the same reason I advocate the withdrawal of the Canadian Intercollegiate Rugby Football Union from the C.I.U. Football is finished for another year and Mr. Rodden, of the Globe, can rant as he likes in the interests of the play-off gate receipts, but I really think something should be done about the hockey situation. A home and home series with Varsity, no matter how interesting, is hardly an excuse for financing a senior hockey team, nor is a membership in the Senior Group hardly the reason for spending a good sum each year on hockey. I have no quarrel with Mr. James Foley's estimable loop and I am glad to see McGill play in the city hockey league but I should also like to see the red hockey team engage in some games with other colleges. An invitation to Harvard and Yale would be hailed by all undergraduates, I am sure, and the fact that our team plays the U.S. college sextettes in New York and Boston in the Christmas holidays at least entitles us to the courtesy of a return contest. Can you not my dear Shapiro, do something about this. I hope you will use your influence with our good and kin' athletic board to arrange some invitation games with other colleges. The American teams will no doubt attract a gate large enough to pay their expenses and something over and this feature should find some favor with our business-like athletic manager.

Get after him anyway and get a few games arranged so that college hockey will not die of dry rot. You will be hailed, sir, as the savior of college hockey in Canada, if not the mid-wife, and that, sir, is something to be able to tell your grandchildren when they clamor on your knee begging for a story in years to come. Think it over, my dear Shapiro, and let us have action by all means.

Constant Reader.

L. S. B. Shapiro, Editor, Down to Brass Tacks.

My Dear Shapiro:—During the past few days, my dear Shapiro, two things have been drawn to my attention, namely: (1) That in a recent issue of McGill Daily you said in this column that all the so-called experts were all wet in the matter of selecting football winners; (2) That in the Monitor, that excellent suburban weekly, one Bobby Forster, on Oct. 12 made the following pickings for the rugby season now drawing to a close:

Interprovincial: Hamilton Tigers.
Intercollegiate: McGill University.
Intermediate Intercollegiate: Loyola College.
Intermediate Q.R.F.U.: Canadian National.
Junior Q.R.F.U.: M.A.A.A.

Don't you think, my dear Shapiro, that we all ought to stand up on the top of the Arts Building and take off our hats to the eminent Mr. Forster.

said that the people of Italy would eventually insist on taking their part in the government and that therefore the dictatorship would fall.

After referring to some famous dictators of history, Alchin commented on the fact that it was due to the dictatorship that Bolshevism was stamped out in Italy. It was due to the dictatorship also, he stated, that Italy gained colonies, respect and many other advantages. Moreover, it was due to this form of government that Italy had such good administrators since had ones reflected on Mussolini himself.

Hall for the negative, told of the way in which Mussolini terrorizes his cabinet while Fascist terrorizes his opponents. He drew a picture first of conditions in Italy and then of those in England showing how the government of the latter was infinitely superior to that of Italy.

After a short rebuttal by Pollard the judges withdrew and the meeting was thrown open to discussion. On the return of the judges Dr. Abbott-Smith announced that the affirmative had won the debate while the honors for the best individual speaker went to H. Alchin.

A prize presented at the end of the year, is given to the best speaker in the whole series of debates.
